Forging ahead: Multiple triggers aid Bharat Forge

But supply challenges, cost pressures to impact margins in the near term: Brokerages

RAM PRASAD SAHU
Mumbai, 22 February

A weak performance in the March quarter due to muted export revenues from commercial vehicles and supply-chain issues led to an 8 per cent fall in the stock of Bharat Forge from the highs this month. While this trend and the pressure on margins will persist in the short term, brokerages are positive on the stock, citing strong growth for non-automotive (auto) business, India's commercial vehicle revival, and revenue inflow from multiple defence projects it has bid for.

Pegged back by a 10 per cent decline in export revenue, the company saw marginal decline in revenue on a sequential basis. The company highlighted that a drop in export revenue was largely due to lower production of Class 8 trucks due to shortage of semiconductor chips.

North American Class 8 truck orders were down 8 per cent month-on-month in January, compared with December last year and 50 per cent lower than the year-ago levels. Lower new orders are due to supply-chain shortage and production constraints. Truck demand in this segment, however, remains strong on the back of robust order backlog, new orders, and production rates.

While supply constraints are expected to ease gradually, the forging company has guided for better domestic and export revenue performance on a sequential basis in the March quarter. The industrial segment, which accounts for 46 per cent of revenue, posted good growth. This was aided by improvement in the oil and gas segment, which is supported by rising crude oil prices. The segment is expected to do well on the back of demand from key markets, such as Europe, the US, and India.

Decline in volumes and raw material pressures took a toll on the margins in the quarter. The operating performance in the quarter was 11 per cent below consensus estimates and was impacted by a weak product mix and commodity inflation, according to Systematix Research.

The company indicated that raw material cost pressures, along with higher logistics and energy costs in Europe due to the ongoing geopolitical crisis, are expected to impact profitability in the first half of calendar year 2022. Lower margin expectations have led analysts at Emkay Research to cut earnings per share estimates for FY22-24 by 2-3 per cent.

A major opportunity from the auto side for the company is electric vehicle (EV) components, with order wins of $50 million (total order wins at $100 million) in the last nine months. Within the EV space, the company is focusing on aluminium forging (lightweighting) and power electronic components.

Appoint two-three key people as life policy's nominees

SANJAY KUMAR SINGH

Not only should a life insurer settle a high percentage of the claims it receives, it should also be quick in doing so. The recently published Handbook on Indian Insurance Statistics for 2020-21 features data on duration-wise claim settlement. Buyers should look it up to see which insurers have been quicker in settling claims. However, for claims to be settled on time, policyholders and nominees, too, must fulfil their obligations.

Fill proposal form carefully

To protect your nominees from hassles at the time of claim settlement, fill the proposal form correctly and completely.

"Don't hide anything just because you may have to submit more documents or undergo further medical tests," says Sajja Praveen Chowdhry, business unit head-term life insurance, PolicyBazaar. Some details are crucial.

"Information related to income, ownership of other life policies, and health must be disclosed truthfully," says Abhishek Misra, chief executive officer and principal officer, Bonanza Insurance. He adds that policyholders should fill the proposal form themselves, or review it after it has been filled by an agent.

Keep family members in the loop

After purchasing a policy, inform the nominee and other key family members.

"In India, family members are often not aware of all the policies purchased by the breadwinner," says Naval Goel, founder and CEO, PolicyX.com.

Update nominee details

Sometimes the nominee changes, but the policyholder fails to inform the insurer. For instance, the policyholder's wife may have been the nominee, but she passes away. The policyholder fails to update the insurer that his child is now the nominee. "If the change was not made prior to the insured's death, the insurer will ask for additional documents, like a succession certificate, to ensure that money is paid to the rightful legal heir," says Atri Chakraborty, chief operating officer, IndiaFirst Life Insurance.

If a nominee's details – address, bank details, etc – change, update that information also at the earliest with the insurer.

Policy age matters

According to Section 45 of the Insurance Laws (Amendment) Act, 2015, no claim can be repudiated after the policy has been in force for three years. "The policy becomes incontestable. Payouts happen faster in such policies," says Chakraborty. If a claim is raised within three years, the insurer can repudiate the claim on the ground of misrepresentation or suppression of material facts. "In such cases, the claim process can become lengthy as the insurer at times gets into a detailed investigation," says Goel.

Provide complete documentation

Claim settlement gets delayed if the nominee submits incomplete documentation. The key documents that need to be provided are the original policy, death certificate, know-your-customer documents, copy of cancelled cheque and bank statement, and filled claim form.

In cases where the insurer wants to investigate more, it can ask for the hospital discharge summary and case-related papers. In case of an accidental death, insurers usually ask for the first information report and the post-mortem report.

Select nominee carefully

During the Covid-19 pandemic, there were many cases of husband and wife passing away within a short span. The heirs had to run around to obtain a succession certificate. In non-life policies, the nominee can receive the money, but holds it in trust for the heirs.

"In life insurance, the concept of a beneficial nominee was introduced through the amendment of 2015. Immediate family members, like parents, spouse, and children, can be appointed beneficial nominees," says Yashojit Mitra, partner, Economic Law Practices.

As LIC's giant IPO nears, concerns over govt control

REUTERS
Mumbai, 22 February

Prospective investors in Life Insurance Corporation (LIC) of India's $8-billion initial public offering (IPO) are seeking assurances from company management that it will not sacrifice their interests to meet the goals set out by the government, its controlling shareholder, said sources.

In virtual roadshows for India's biggest-ever public listing, LIC management and the IPO bankers have been peppered with questions about the insurer's past investments and their quality, four people with knowledge of the matter said.

LIC has, in recent years, been a key buyer of shares in state-owned firms sold off by New Delhi, often bailing out less-than-successful public issues of shares. It has also been tapped to rescue struggling financial institutions.

Potential conflicts of interest issues are taking centre-stage in the IPO roadshows that began last week and are expected to go on till the end of the month, said sources.

"The government tends to act as a regulator, manager, and shareholder and it tends to get its position confused at different points in time," said Shriram Subramanian, founder of proxy advisory firm InGovern, who has not attended the roadshows.

"The government ministries may tend to think that LIC is 100 per cent under their control and would like to exert that kind of an influence whenever required and that is a concern for investors," added Subramanian.
